India's diversity in terms of socio-economic political & cultural system provides unusual opportunity for the study of Indian center-state system comparatively. This paper attempts to study the power of the center & the autonomy of the state within the India Federal system, which reflect & articulate well-defined regional identities. There is an increasing need to understand that despite the wide area of powers, with which the center is armed by the constitution, there has been a growing trend of assertion of autonomy on the part of the states. The center-state relationship in the context of liberalization also needs to be focused.
